Entercom Partners With FlyTunes To Deliver Mobile Radio Streams

Broadcaster's terrestrial stations will be delivered to iPhone, other smart phones

LANCASTER, PA – July 1, 2008 – Today FlyTunes announced that Entercom Communications Corp. (NYSE:ETM), one of the top 5 radio broadcasting groups in the U.S., has joined the FlyTunes content network. Starting immediately with its affiliates in San Francisco (KOIT · KDFC · KBWF) and Seattle (KNDD · KMTT · KISW · KKWF), Entercom stations will be available in the new “Cities” section of the FlyTunes Guide. Additional stations in other Entercom markets will roll out on FlyTunes over the next 90 days.

The FlyTunes network is the first content network specifically designed to deliver radio, video and podcasts to smart phones such as the Apple iPhone. The network has experienced explosive growth in users and in content offerings since its launch in January 2008.

According to Entercom Senior Vice President, Digital, Sandy Smallens, “Entercom takes pride in being a pioneer in providing digital options to its millions of listeners around the country. FlyTunes is clearly a leader in delivering high-quality mobile broadcast streams, and we are excited to be the first terrestrial broadcast group to join this rapidly growing network.”

“We are very proud that a respected broadcast company like Entercom has partnered with FlyTunes to help deliver their stations to mobile listeners,” said FlyTunes CEO Sam Abadir. “Mobile devices present a completely new paradigm for content and ad delivery, very different from traditional broadcast radio and TV, and clearly Entercom understands the value of the medium and the potential of our network.”

Entercom's stream hosting provider Liquid Compass is partnering with FlyTunes to facilitate the launch. Liquid Compass will incorporate FlyTunes' FlyCast server software throughout their Content Delivery Network, which will ensure quality, continuous stream delivery and mobile compatibility for Entercom's listening audience.

With the addition of Entercom's stations, FlyTunes offers over 650 channels of music, local and national news, top local personalities, weather, video, and podcasts to smart phone listeners in 130 countries around the world. FlyTunes provides one of the only ways for mobile listeners to take their favorite local stations with them.

FlyTunes is completely free – new users can sign up at <http://www.FlyTunes.fm>.
